

From Training towards the World of Work

The case study focuses upon the challenge of recent university graduates in the field of agriculture in obtaining a job and in getting accustomed to working life. It describes the development and implementation of a Masters programme in Management for specialists in agriculture. The case study demonstrates the importance of taking into consideration the mainstream national requirements for academic training when developing more practically oriented LLL programmes.

Key themes

Course design

Graduates

Postgraduate study

Vocational education

Dr Aniko Kalman, University of Debrecen, Hungary

Email: aniko@tigris.klte.hu