

University of Limerick Mature Student Access Course – Pilot Year 2000/01

The case study focuses upon the challenge of meeting the needs of socially or economically disadvantaged students through the effective and delivery of Access courses

It describes the background to the University of Limerick's decision to adopt a tried and tested Access course model and its successful delivery. It also describes the components of the programme and the outcome of the course evaluation.

It illustrates the need to investigate and research alternative course models to ensure that student needs are effectively met.

Key Themes

Access

Course design

Returners

Patricia-Anne Moore, The University of Limerick, Ireland

Email: Patricia-Anne.Moore@ul.ie